

Mark of distinction and huge design flexibility

Hettich presents TopLine 35 sliding door system

Kirchlengern, February 2010. The trend towards sliding doors is unbroken as they are not only practical but also an impressive design element. The new TopLine 35 sliding door system from Hettich is the answer to providing an attractive mark of distinction with tremendous design flexibility.

Designed for doors weighing up to 35 kg, Hettich presents the newly developed TopLine 35 sliding door system for overlay doors on wardrobes and hallway units. The door elements can be positioned one in front of the other to leave them completely flush. Alternatively, projecting handle elements are easy to include by using spacers. Cabinet end profiles permit the same design of cabinet for sliding and hinged doors. The unobtrusive running profile discreetly integrates into any furniture design. The guiding profile provides design flexibility: it is mounted out of sight below the bottom panel or, by way of option, in front of it. The sliding doors can be aligned in situ using an integrated height adjustment.

Furniture manufacturers hitherto favouring inset doors can use TopLine 35 to transform model lines into designer-look furniture featuring overlay doors with very little effort.

The sliding door hardware is available in the form of a set comprising runner and guide profiles, guide components, cabinet end profiles, door profiles, brushes and running components, or on its own.
