

RoomSpin wins German Design Award 2025

Turning swivelling movement brings new drive to transforming office worlds

When interior furnishings and workstations are able to turn in rigidly defined office structures, you get entirely new design and usage concepts. Presenting RoomSpin, Hettich provides a unique, movable system base for transforming furniture and rooms. This innovation and its huge potential for change has now brought RoomSpin the German Innovation Award 2025 in the ”#W2 Excellence in Business to Business – Office Solution” category.

RoomSpin already caused a sensation when it premiered at Orgatec 2024. Taking the example of Kuhn's creative “Layers moved by RoomSpin” office line, the design and manufacturing company behind solutions for high quality interior fixture and fittings, Hettich showed the tremendous potential this gives interior designers, architects and project developers. Based on its unique “translatory rotational movement,” they can now pursue whole new design and planning avenues. Hot on the heels of the Architecture and Office 2024 innovation award comes RoomSpin's second accolade in the form of the German Innovation Award 2025.

Multifunctional use of space

The German Innovation Award goes to products, projects and pioneering achievements that enduringly improve life through innovation and advancement. Increasingly, modern working environments are calling for interior design concepts that provide flexibility and efficiency in the way they use even smaller type spaces. Employing a curated movement, RoomSpin lets staff rearrange their furniture and workspaces in a matter of seconds and match them to the particular work situation. Whatever the chosen concept looks like, office space always remains clearly zoned. Setups, spatial effect, lighting or power and communication sockets – everything can be planned in advance with perfect results. Utilising lever forces, turning RoomSpin based furnishing solutions is far more convenient than moving mobile furniture items that then need rearranging every time demands change. Based on the turning RoomSpin system, room elements can be configured in any way – from cabinets and room dividers that can be used from both sides to single person workstations and areas for holding meetings.
