‘German Design Award 2027’ for ExeoTech by Hettich

Drawer system wins yet another design award

Following the ‘Red Dot Award 2026’ this summer, Hettich’s ExeoTech drawer system has now received its second accolade, the ‘German Design Award 2027’, as a ‘Winner’ in the ‘Excellent Product Design – Furniture’ category. With this award, the international jury recognises the successful combination of sophisticated design, high functionality and industrial efficiency.

ExeoTech stands for ‘Form pushes Function’. The drawer system forms part of Hettich’s versatile ‘YOU Platform’, which offers kitchen and furniture manufacturers a wide range of options for design and differentiation. As the ‘efficiency champion’ within the system, ExeoTech is specifically geared towards high-volume industrial manufacturing. With its slim 11 mm drawer side profile and precise edges, the drawer system embodies a distinctive design language that can be integrated into a wide variety of furniture concepts.

Cost-effective manufacturing for the high-volume segment

Thanks to a standardised drilling pattern in the body, different runner systems can be used flexibly depending on requirements. This simplifies planning and production and increases the system’s versatility across different furniture segments. ExeoTech pot-and-pan drawers can be fitted with railing, high-sided panels or customised side panels. A wide range of bespoke Interior organisation solutions creates added value for a variety of applications. Available in white, silver and anthracite, these colour options open up a wide range of possibilities for creating distinctive furniture designs − without increasing complexity.

Winning the German Design Award 2027 underlines Hettich's commitment to developing innovative solutions that focus equally on design, cost-effectiveness and user benefits. ExeoTech demonstrates how modern drawer systems open up new opportunities for furniture manufacturers in terms of product differentiation and efficient production.
